The 47-year journey of Times of Oman

Forty-eight years ago, in late 1974, an English newspaper was perhaps just a dream for the people of the Sultanate of Oman.

So then, was the birth of Times of Oman sheer destiny? To a large extent, yes! Times would not have come into existence if that single telex message from Singapore had not reached late Essa bin Mohammed Al Zedjali's desk while he was serving as director in the Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

The much-talked about telex came from a company called Flying Tiger Corporation based in Los Angeles, USA, asking for an overflight permission and as the director of the department, it was part of Essa bin Mohammed Al Zedjali's duty to give permission to commercial flights, military flights and personal flights flying over Oman.

They had sent the telex to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs addressing the country as, 'Muscat, Oman, Saudi Arabia'. Infuriated by the content of the telex, Essa could hardly keep his emotions under control. After three days of soul-searching, he asked himself: Should we blame them for making this error or are we at fault?

In the 70s, there were neither any radio or TV stations. The absence of an English newspaper kept Oman in obscurity. It was then that the idea of Times of Oman germinated. And then, there was no looking back!

Beginnings are never easy and as expected, it wasn't for Times either. Time ticked on until D Day, February 23, 1975 arrived!

The Sultanate of Oman witnessed the birth of Times of Oman, the country's first English daily, in an exciting tabloid format.

It endured competitive challenges, sustained the growing pains and had brushes with unforeseen difficulties to become the most popular English daily of Oman. Since then February 23 is a day of great significance no matter which milestone it crosses.

Though Essa bin Mohammed Al Zedjali is no longer with us, his sons have kept alive his legacy, and continue to honour the spirit with which this publication was first created. Today Times of Oman's readership includes millions who visit timesofoman.com and the paper's diverse social media platforms.

Apart from being a market leader on the newspaper front, Times of Oman has also expanded further by launching TFM and TTV.

In another first, Times of Oman released the country's first e-paper in the early 2000s.

Coincidentally, the funeral prayers and burial of the late Essa bin Mohammed Al Zedjali were performed on 23 February, 2013, exactly 38 years after his dream was first realised. Times of Oman will forever remain his lasting legacy to all of us.

Indian schools will now take students of all nationalities

Times News Service

MUSCAT: Children of all nationalities will be allowed to seek admission to Indian schools in Oman for the new academic term.

A member of the Board of Directors of Indian Schools in Oman has said that the decision to allow expatriate students of all nationalities was taken owing to the large number of seats now available in Indian schools in the country. There are roughly 39,000 students learning at Indian schools, down from a peak of about 46,000.

"However, we will only know the actual number of students once we resume physical classes next term," said the board member. "What has happened is that many of our students went home to India during the pandemic, and continued their online learning from there. A final count can therefore only be taken once they come back.

"The reason we have opened admission to children of all nationalities is because we now have many places in our schools," he added. "This is for two reasons: First, many expatriates left Oman during the pandemic, and second, we have opened a new school in Bausher that gives us the ability to accommodate more children."

"As a community school system for Indians in Oman, a majority of our students are Indians, and although we always encourage students of other nationalities to join us, there was simply no place to accommodate them because there were no seats available. Even the Indian students were forced to seek admission elsewhere."

Renewed hope and optimism in the air as recoveries rise, casualties decline

Times News Service

MUSCAT: As Oman marks two years since the COVID-19 pandemic came to this country, there is a feeling of hope and renewed optimism that this year will be far better than 2020 and 2021.

More than 95 percent of people in the country who contracted COVID-19 have recovered from the disease, while the number of COVID-related deaths has decreased significantly. Of the 377,948 people who were infected by the virus, 359,445 have recovered. Unfortunately, however, 4,238 people lost their lives to COVID-19.

As on 9 February, more than half a million people had been administered booster doses, and more than 6.67 million COVID vaccine doses had been administered to eligible sections of the population. Until that date, some 1.77 million Omanis and 1.4 million expats had been jabbed with one dose, and 1.66 million Omanis and 1.31 expatriates had received two.

The first cases of the coronavirus in Oman were reported on 24 February, 2020, ushering in a period few of us had ever seen. Universities and schools switched to online-only modes of learning, travel was severely restricted as the airport closed temporarily and a series of lockdowns were enforced to keep the populations safe and release the immense pressure faced by hospitals and healthcare workers. >A5

4TH MARCH

Oman to host World Walking Championships

MUSCAT: The World Athletics Race Walking Team Championships (Muscat 22) will start on 4 March 2022 at the Oman Convention and Exhibition Centre.

The two-day event to be hosted by the Sultanate of Oman is being organised by the World Athletics, in cooperation with the Oman Athletics Association.

As many as 1,000 male and female runners from 60 countries from around the world will participate in the tournament to contest the seven laps of the race.

The championship will witness the participation of the Omani national team, consisting of 16 players distributed between two general categories for a distance of 20km and 35km, in addition to the male category for a distance of 10km.

Teams from about 60 countries from all over the world will participate in the tournament to compete for seven categories, namely the 10km walk race (age below 20) for both genders, 20 km walk race for females, 8km sequential walking race (master class), 35km walk race (unisex), 20km walk race for males and a 10km walk race (master class - unisex).

The championship's referees list will include 80 Omani referees who will be responsible for the competitors' adherence to the championship's procedures and regulations before the start of the races. It also includes 22 international referees distributed in the race tracks to ensure fair competition for all competitors.

The World Athletics Race Walking Team Championships is organised every two years by the World Athletics. The event is a long-distance walking race. It is considered different from running in that there must be one foot in contact with the ground at all times.

It is worth noting that the tournament was scheduled to be held in the Belarusian city of Minsk, but it was cancelled and postponed several times due to the coronavirus (COVID-19) pandemic and travel restrictions. -ONA

Research project on organisational pride wins award

Principal investigator Dr. Omar Durrah, Associate Professor at Dhofar University, was awarded for his research on 'Organisational pride as an antecedent of employee creativity in the petrochemical industry'

They should also enhance attitudinal pride by celebrating success and highlighting key organisational achievements to make employees aware of the success records of the company, including market share and position or company growth and image.

He also suggested that managers should consider information about both the organisation as well as the employees while developing marketing communication messages to strengthen attitudinal pride and encourage corporate social responsibility (CSR) activities in the organisation to boost positive attitudinal pride toward their organisation. Besides, they should strive to strike a work-life balance for their employees to stimulate attitudinal pride, reduce organisational cynicism by increasing co-worker trust and by decreasing job stress. They should also include organisational attitudinal pride in their annual employee surveys in addition to other criteria, such as employee satisfaction.

The research team included Dr. Kamaal Alilil, and Dr. Moazz Gharib, both Assistant Professors at Dhofar University, Dr. Souzan Hannawi, Assistant Professor at Wadi International University (Syria) in addition to Dr. Omar Durrah. The research project was published in European Journal of Innovation Management with an impact factor 4.691.

Dr. Omar said, "We are extremely honoured that our paper was selected for the National Research Award. Being recognised, being seen, heard and appreciated for our contributions to research is a great honour. This award is both a validation and vindication of the tireless work that has gone into our research paper. We share this achievement as a team."

Sultanate of Oman. Employing a simple random sample technique, they collected data using a questionnaire from 278 respondents working in five major petrochemical organisations in Oman. Data were examined using structural equation modeling.

Dr. Omar maintained that the results of the study indicated that both emotional and attitudinal pride were at moderate levels in the companies surveyed. So was the level of creativity in the petrochemical companies. He further said that the findings revealed that attitudinal organisational pride was the only dimension that had a direct, significant and positive bearing on creativity, while emotional pride had little to do in fostering creativity.

According to Dr. Omar, based on the results of this study, it can safely be argued that attitudinal pride has a significant effect on creativity. Attitudinal pride can be viewed as a form of collective pride arising from the need for employees to be identified with a particular group, such as their organisation. Dr. Omar, therefore, suggested that managers should, besides focusing on the organisation as a whole, pay more attention to the events that generate attitudinal organisational pride and avoid events that decrease it.

Oman oil poised to touch $100

The rise in oil prices is because of the tension on the Ukrainian-Russian border, say analysts

Times News Service

MUSCAT: Oman oil continues to rise and is just a few dollars short of the historic $100.

A statement issued by the Oman News Agency (ONA) said, "Today, the official price of Oman oil for April delivery reached $96 and 54 cents."

Speaking exclusively to the Times of Oman, Khalfan Al Touqi, writer and economic analyst, said "the rise in oil prices is because of the tension on the Ukrainian-Russian border." He pointed out that Russia's oil and gas sector is little affected by this ever-growing tension, in fact, it stands to gain from the crisis. I do not expect a full-scale war between Russia and Ukraine. At its worse, it may be a limited military strike.

Possibilities

"If at all the situation escalates into a full-scale war, a third world war cannot be ruled out. That is because Europe is heavily dependent on Russian gas, oil and food. Ukraine too, on the other hand supplies food items to countries in Europe."

He asserted that these tensions were escalated by Russia for some political and material gains. So, it will calm down sooner than later."

Al Touqi said, "I do not think the price of a barrel of oil will rise

High oil prices will cause inflation to rise in countries importing goods. The Sultanate too is an importer of many goods. However, as an exporter of oil it will also see rise in income and be able to pay off debts quicker above 100 dollars. Before it does, the two sides will de-escalate tension and the prices will return to 80-85 dollars."

He added the rise in the price of oil has two sides-- the first is negative and the other positive. The rise will cause inflation in countries importing goods and that includes the Sultanate of Oman, since they import a majority of goods. The positive side is that the government will pay off the debts and the credit level of the Sultanate will rise.

Impact of sanctions

Dr. Mohammad Al Wardi also spoke to Times of Oman about the current oil prices: "Oil prices are approaching the $100 mark due to the escalating tension between Russia and Ukraine."

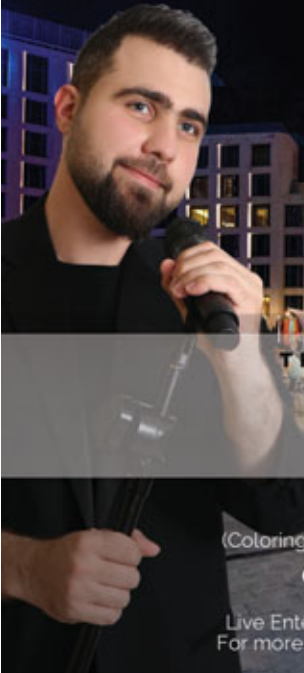

Dr. Al Wardi stressed that if harsh sanctions are imposed on Russia, oil and gas prices will remain high for a long period, which will be in the interest of the oil producing countries in general and the Gulf countries, in particular.

ROYAL HOSPITAL'S NATIONAL ONCOLOGY CENTRE

Tumour removed successfully

MUSCAT: A medical team from the Royal Hospital's National Oncology Centre on Tuesday met with success in conducting a radiotherapy for a patient suffering from a cardiac tumour.

The local excision of the tumour was followed with precise mapping and intensive radiotherapy that enabled the team to continuously monitor the patient's condition.

Dr. Thuraya Nassir Al Hajri, Consultant and Head of Radiotherapy Department at the National Oncology Centre, told Oman News Agency (ONA) that the risks involved stem from the rare occurrence of such cases and the application of radiotherapy therein at a global level, as well as the intensity of radio waves needed to eliminate the tumours, while the heart is in continuous motion, without damaging the adjoining tissues.

"There was apprehension from the probability of heart clotting or muscle weakening during the radiotherapy session, leading to the patient's death," said Dr. Thuraya. This time, we safely conducted a total of 30 radiotherapy sessions in a span of six weeks, she added.

"This case constituted the topic of a scientific paper published in a Cambridge University journal that discussed the causes of cardiac tumours, their symptoms and their treatment by adequate radiotherapy, as well as the associated difficulties. — ONA

PUBLIC AUTHORITY FOR SOCIAL INSURANCE

PASI gets 5 certificates of merit

MUSCAT: The Public Authority for Social Insurance (PASI) has received five certificates of merit—four of which with commendation—from the International Social Security Association's regional forum on good practices in Asia and the Pacific.

A first project, titled 'Developing Collection Mechanisms' (of insurance bill, collection companies, electronic payment gateways, virtual accounts, remote cheque deposit), was aimed at promoting the culture of paying subscriptions through e-payment channels and underling the significance of the same in terms of speed and accuracy.

The second project, on 'Implementing the Quality Management System', sought to improve transactions carried out at the PASI and to provide sustainable services that meet the requirements of customers—with high quality and efficiency.

The third project, titled 'Cooperation Programme with Academic and Educational Institutions in the Sultanate of Oman', was designed to inculcate a culture of social protection and its importance among children and students studying in various educational and academic institutions, job seekers and parents.

The fourth project, titled 'PASI's experience in implementing a system of business continuity management', dealt with managing comprehensive operations that determine the potential threats staged at PASI and their impact on basic operations pertaining to assets and human resources.

A fifth titled "Quantitative and Qualitative Analysis of Performance and Risks of PASI's Investment Portfolio", was aimed at measuring the level of risks quantitatively and qualitatively. — ONA

COVID-19 PANDEMIC

< FROM A1 Optimism coming back

It is telling that academic institutions have transitioned towards blended learning and are on the cusp of returning to in-person classes, if they have not already done so.

On 21 February, Oman took another major step towards normalcy when the national Civil Aviation Authority decided to end compulsory pre-registration of passengers, having already previously scrapped quarantine rules for arrivals for those who are fully vaccinated.

"Passengers travelling to the Sultanate of Oman are not required to register anymore at <http://travel.moh.gov.om>," said CAA in an announcement.

"Going forward, people in Oman can resume their travel plans which had been postponed or cancelled due to the pandemic," said Faiyaz Khan, general manager for Travel Point, a travel agency in the country. "People can once again look forward to planning their holidays."

The above decision comes just weeks after the Supreme Committee announced the easing of some rules that had been initially brought in to curb the spread of the pandemic, and then once again clamped during the Omicron wave of infections in the country.

The Supreme Committee had suspended Friday prayers in mosques on 21 January, before giving them the green light to resume at 50 percent capacity on 9 February. At that time, the committee took the decision to once again allow conferences and other large scale events, at 70 percent of the venue capacity. Oman News Agency reported that all attendees to such events need to be vaccinated, and should adhere to all preventive measures and requirements.

The seedlings of optimism have been sown inside many a citizen and expatriate in Oman, many of whom are eagerly looking forward to the coming months and what they bring.

"My children were so used to playing with their friends in parks and on the beaches...for about two years, we were scared of what would happen to them if they went outside, so we would prevent them from leaving the home," said Alisha, an expatriate in the country. "For the last few weeks, however, our children have been playing outdoors with their friends once again"

She added: "It is so good to see all of them mingling together and laughing with joy as they play with vigour to make up for lost time. Their laughter is truly the biggest representation of the optimism we are feeling. Of course, let us not still forget to mask up when required and take the necessary precautions."

Ahmed, an Omani restaurant owner, said, "There is a little bit of optimism seeping back into the market. Our volumes of sales and customers have been steadily increasing now for the last few weeks. There is still quite a bit of reluctance to spend among people, but the optimism we are seeing now had been missing for so long. All of us have endured so much during these last two years. Let us hope that the coming months add to the positive developments we are seeing."

Putin signs decree to recognise independence of Donetsk, Luhansk

Putin made this announcement during a televised address to Russians on Monday

MOSCOW: Russian President Vladimir Putin on Monday signed a decree recognizing the independence of breakaway regions Donetsk and Luhansk.

Putin made this announcement during a televised address to Russians on Monday.

Earlier in the day, Putin held a phone call with his French counterpart Emmanuel Macron and German chancellor Olaf Scholz and stated that he will be signing a decree recognising the independence of Donetsk and Luhansk.

According to the statement released by Kremlin, both the Western leaders voiced their dissatisfaction on hearing Putin's decision.

"Russian President Vladimir Putin had phone conversations with French President Emmanuel Macron and German Chancellor Olaf Scholz. Vladimir Putin briefed them on the results of the extended meeting of the Russian Security Council, which considered the current situation around Donbas in the context of the State Duma's decision on the recognition of Donetsk and Luhansk people's republics," the statement says.

Russia claims the surge of forces has always been for military exercises and that it poses no threat to Ukraine or any other nation, but has refused to offer any other explanation for the biggest build-up of military might in Europe since the Cold War.

On Saturday, Russia's Rostov Region had opened 15 border crossings for refugees from the eastern Ukrainian region of Donbas. Later on the same day, Denis Pushilin, the head of pro-Russian separatist DPR announced that he had signed a decree on general mobilisation.

Zelenskyy: Ukraine is 'not afraid'

Ukrainian President Volodymyr Zelenskyy delivered an address on Tuesday after urgent consultations with world leaders. He said he demanded "clear support" from the West. Zelenskyy said that Ukraine is "not afraid of anything or anyone," after Russia's recognition of the two separatist regions.

He said that Ukraine's borders will remain as they are and that Russia's actions are "a violation of the sovereignty and territorial integrity" of Ukraine.

The Ukrainian leader accused Russia of legalizing its own troops, which he said have been in the Donbas since 2014.

He added that Ukraine supports a political and diplomatic settlement. Ukrainian Foreign Minister Dmytro Kuleba said he would head to Washington to meet with US Secretary of State Blinken after they spoke about the developments. "I underscored the need to impose tough sanctions on Russia in response to its illegal actions," he added.

Biden condemns Russia's independence recognition
US President Joe Biden spoke with France President Emmanuel Macron and German Chancellor Olaf Scholz on Monday about the ongoing escalation along the borders of Ukraine and condemned Russian President Vladimir Putin's decision to recognize the independence of Ukraine's breakaway regions.

All the leaders further discussed how they will continue to coordinate their response on the next steps. Biden, in a separate call, also spoke with Ukraine's President Volodymyr Zelenskyy and reaffirmed US commitment to Ukraine's sovereignty.

In his phone call with Zelenskyy, Biden reiterated that the United States would respond swiftly and decisively, in lock-step with its Allies and partners, to further Russian aggression against Ukraine.

UKRAINE CRISIS

'Russia recognising Donetsk, Luhansk violates Ukraine's territorial integrity'

NEW YORK: UN chief Antonio Guterres said that Russia's decision to recognise Donetsk and Luhansk regions of Ukraine as independent is a violation of the territorial integrity and sovereignty of Ukraine and inconsistent with the principles of the Charter of the United Nations.

This comes after Russian President Vladimir Putin formally recognised separatist regions in Ukraine's east as independent states. In a statement issued by Spokesperson Stephane Dujarric, the UN chief calls for "the peaceful settlement of the conflict in eastern Ukraine, in accordance with the Minsk Agreements, as endorsed by the Security Council in resolution 2202 (2015)".

Moreover, Guterres considers Russia's decision to be "a violation of the territorial integrity and sovereignty of Ukraine and inconsistent with the principles of the Charter of the United Nations". Amid an intense spike in shelling in eastern Ukraine by opposing sides, the concentration of Russian troops reportedly continues to increase at the country's borders.

The Secretary-General is urging all relevant actors to focus their efforts on "ensuring an immediate cessation of hostilities, protection of civilians and civilian infrastructure, preventing any actions and statements that may further escalate the dangerous situation in and around Ukraine and prioritising diplomacy to address all issues peacefully".

Dujarric assured that in line with the relevant General Assembly resolutions, the UN remains fully supportive of the sovereignty, independence and territorial integrity of Ukraine, within its internationally recognised borders.

The UN chief was planning to make an official visit to the Democratic Republic of the Congo, but in light of the deteriorating situation regarding Ukraine, he has cancelled the visit. ANI

COVID-19 RESTRICTIONS

Trudeau says 'emergency not over' after blockades

OTTAWA: Canadian lawmakers voted on Monday night to extend emergency powers allowing police to break up blockades by protesters against COVID-19 restrictions.

The country's House of Commons voted 185 to 151 in favor of extending the powers.

Canadian Prime Minister Justin Trudeau said earlier on Monday that he would continue to use emergency powers to stop the "dangerous and unlawful" protests that choked the streets of Ottawa for weeks and created havoc for one of the country's major trade arteries.

"Right now... people [are] out there indicating that they are ready to blockade, to continue their illegal occupations to disrupt Canadians' lives. We feel that this measure needs to remain in place," he said. Trudeau was speaking to reporters for the first time since authorities broke up the long-standing blockade after he invoked the country's Emergencies Act for the first time since it became law in 1988. The Canadian capital was thrust into the spotlight after convoys of long-haul truckers and their supporters descended on the city on January 29 to protest a COVID vaccine mandate for their profession.

Although 90% of Canada's truckers are vaccinated, and both major trucking unions disavowed the protest, the movement managed to keep Ottawa at a standstill for much of February and clog trade routes, blocking a bridge for days between the Canadian city of Windsor and the US city of Detroit.

The protest was also criticized for providing a platform for conspiracy theorists and far-right ideologies. Trudeau had stressed his government did not want to use the measure but felt it had been boxed into a corner. DW

Tonga reconnects to internet after volcano eruption

NUKU'ALOFA: Full internet access has been restored in Tonga five weeks after the eruption of the Hunga Tonga Hunga Ha'apai undersea volcano, local media reports said on Tuesday.

Residents were able to connect with the digital world on the main island of Tongatapu and the island of Eua.

"People on the main island will have access almost immediately," Tonga Cable chief executive James Panuve told Reuters. The tiny South Pacific kingdom's undersea fiber-optic cable, which is used to transmit almost all digital information and was damaged in the seaquake, has been repaired.

Tongans had to use makeshift satellite services as the repairs to the cable were made.

Repair ship Reliance took 20 days to replace the 92-kilometer (57-mile) section of the 827 km cable that connects the island nation to Fiji and other international networks.

"Thanks, optic fiber internet. We can now see the world," news portal Kaniva Tonga quoted resident Paulo Lātu's post on Facebook.

The eruption that took place late in January, triggered a tsunami that reached as far as Alaska, Japan and South America.

The Tongan government had said that 84% of its population of nearly 105,000 people was affected by what experts have deemed one of the world's worst volcanic eruptions in decades.

The next task is to repair the domestic cable connecting Tongatapu with the outer islands that bore the brunt of the tsunami, Panuve said, adding that it could take six to nine months. DW

AMBASSADOR’S MESSAGE

In my capacity of Ambassador of Japan, I would like to extend my warm greetings to the people of the Sultanate of Oman. It is my honour to celebrate together with you the birthday of His Majesty the Emperor of Japan today on February 23rd.

I arrived at Muscat on January 11th, thus I started my duties in Oman by joining the people celebrating the second anniversary of the accession of His Majesty Sultan Haitham bin Tarik to the throne. I would herewith like to renew my heartfelt congratulations to His Majesty the Sultan of Oman.

Today’s world has constantly confronted challenges and changes. Existing values and past experience may sometimes lose their direction, whilst the long-standing person-to-person friendship has enhanced its importance all the more. Indeed, Japan has long enjoyed the privilege, as many friends, as represented by Oman Japan Friendship Association (OJFA) and others, have always extended to us courage, support and solidarity. The people of Japan will never forget the heartwarming Omani support after the great earthquake in Japan in 2011. Japanese communities here in Oman highly appreciate the considerate treatment as elaborated under the current pandemic.

His Majesty the Emperor of Japan ascended the throne in 2019, and initiated his Era “REIWA”, meant to be a beautiful harmony. This year marks the 4th year of this Era of beautiful harmony, and this 23rd day of February 2022, His Majesty becomes 62 years old.

As we recall with friends of Japan, Their Majesties the Emperor and Empress visited Oman in 1994 as the then Crown Prince and Crown Princess. Seven years later in 2001, His Majesty recited his recollection of Oman, which reads: “Across the waters came this Arabian horse”.

Twenty eight years later this year, Japan and Oman celebrate the 50th anniversary of diplomatic relations. I see it a precious opportunity to look back to the history of our collaboration.

By now, a large number of Japanese companies and investors have inspired and involved in a series of projects, and sustained the social infrastructures and life-lines for the people in Oman. Powers, energies, water, transport, logistics... these are just a few examples.

This 50th anniversary will also amplify chances to look forward to new avenues towards future collaboration. Advanced technologies, management skills, capacity building, as well as strategic perspectives and networking... these would be some relevant concepts. Yet, whatsoever should be done, pursuit for new avenues shall be made and based only upon our long-standing, heartwarming human connections.

I am quite optimistic about the value of person-to-person collaboration, and even more encouraged when I conveyed many congratulations to women’s hockey team “Sakura Japan” for winning Asian Cup last month, whilst at the same time I extended many the 50th anniversary of diplomatic relations and thanks to the Ministry of Culture, Sports and Youth, Oman Hockey Association and all the people who successfully organised the Asian Cup 2022 in Muscat. During the tournament weeks, the spirit of collaboration and mutual appreciation was really working, and made possible its admirable success.

I would herewith like to renew my wishes for the continued prosperity and happiness of His Majesty Sultan Haitham bin Tarik and of the people of the Sultanate of Oman, and to congratulate the two countries for their 50th anniversary of diplomatic relations, and hereby would like to most cordially celebrate the birthday of His Majesty the Emperor.

JOTA YAMAMOTO
Ambassador of Japan to the Sultanate of Oman

Warm and Heartfelt Greetings to His Majesty, Emperor Naruhito of Japan on the Occasion of his 62nd Birthday

Warm and Heartfelt Greetings to His Majesty, Emperor Naruhito of Japan on the Occasion of his 62nd Birthday.

On behalf of all the Members of the Board of the Oman Japan Friendship Association (OJFA), I convey heartfelt greetings to His Majesty, Emperor Naruhito of Japan, on the auspicious occasion of his 62nd birthday.

It gives us pleasure to share that, this year, Oman is celebrating the second Anniversary of His Majesty Sultan Haitham Bin Tarik’s, Accession day. Under his wise and visionary leadership, Oman will continue to move ahead on the path of progress, backed by peace and stability. We pray to the Almighty to bless His Majesty with good health and long life.

Oman and Japan, two great nations with inspiring culture and heritage share a deep-rooted relationship that goes back to hundreds of years. Over the years, these strong bonds have continued to grow from strength to strength. Bringing people of both nations, closer and offering numerous cultural, and economic opportunities to benefit from.

Apart from cultural aspects, Oman and Japan continue to take big strides on the economic front backed by the strengths of both the nations. Japan has gained very high reputation for its expertise and precision in manufacturing a range of products that include Machinery, Iron, Steel, Electronics, Automotive and more. Due to high demands for such products from Japan, Oman witnesses continued imports from Japan. Similarly, as major producer of oil and gas, aluminium and fishery products, Oman has remained a preferred nation to cater to the demands of the people of Japan, through exports. It is also very encouraging to note that a number of Japanese companies, have invested in Oman and operate their businesses through joint ventures in various sectors, including the energy sector.

Today, on such a beautiful occasion, the Oman-Japan Friendship Association reaffirms its commitment to further strengthen the bonds of friendship that bind Oman and Japan.

The Oman Japan Friendship Association, plays a responsible role in promoting this remarkable friendship between the two countries to even greater levels. Over the years, in association with the Embassy of Japan, the Oman Japan Friendship Association has conducted several cultural exchange programmes and paved the way for improving people-to-people contacts. Such initiatives have cultivated a sense of curiosity, encouraging people of both nations to learn more about the absorbing culture and heritage of both nations. These initiatives ranged from musical concerts to fashion shows, book fair, art exhibitions, cultural dances and much more.

The last two years had been challenging, due to which many cultural initiatives had to be either put on hold or rescheduled. However, the digital world, opened the doors to a whole new realm of staying connected wherever people were, yet staying apart. Even though people were encouraged to limit people-to-people contacts, they were invited to participate in a few online events and programmes.

In September 2021, to mark the 50th anniversary of establishing diplomatic relationship between Japan and Oman, the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Japan, invited the general public to submit designs for a 50th anniversary logo to be used to promote the events.

Each year, through events and activities like these, the Oman Japan Friendship Association uses every opportunity to encourage people of both nations to participate and benefit from the strengths of each nation. Going forward, the Association will continue to plan and initiate several such events and activities that will bring people of Oman and Japan closer. On the special occasion, 62nd Birthday of His Majesty Emperor Naruhito, once again, on behalf of all the Board members of the Oman Japan Friendship Association, I convey sincere greetings. May God Almighty grant him good health and long life. And may the inspiring relationship between Oman and Japan, continue to grow stronger.

Congratulations and Warm wishes to the people of Japan on the occasion of the Japanese National Day and the 62nd Birthday of His Majesty Emperor Naruhito

Taking Lasting Friendship to Greater Heights

Oman and Japan, two great nations, with rich culture and heritage, have a strong and inspiring relationship. For generations, the people of both the nations, have remained rooted in traditional values like loyalty and generosity.

The Oman Japan Friendship Association, plays a passionate role in enhancing and promoting the ties between Oman and Japan. Through specially planned cultural programmes and several other initiatives, the Association aims to bring people of both the nations closer. Enabling them to benefit from each other’s rich heritage and culture.

Today, on this special occasion, the Oman Japan Friendship Association reaffirms its commitment to the spirit of everlasting bonds between Oman and Japan.

Oil prices jump, shares sink as Russia edges towards Ukraine

Russia is a major energy producer and the tensions over Ukraine have brought wide swings in volatile energy prices

TRADING: US trading was closed on Monday for Presidents Day, but markets in Europe and Asia shuddered as Putin moved to secure Russia's hold on Ukraine's rebel regions, adding to fears of a full-scale invasion. - ONA

BANGKOK: Oil prices surged nearly 5 per cent and stock prices dropped after Russian President Vladimir Putin ordered forces into separatist regions of eastern Ukraine, bringing a long-feared invasion a step closer.

Russia is a major energy producer and the tensions over Ukraine have brought wide swings in volatile energy prices, on top of the inevitable risks of a broader conflict.

Oil prices already had surged recently to their highest level since 2014. By early yesterday, the advance of US benchmark crude oil had abated slightly. It was up $3.66, or 4.1 per cent, at $93.87 per barrel in electronic trading on the New York Mercantile Exchange. The price of Brent crude, the standard for international oils, gained $2.71, or 2.9 per cent, to $98.10 per barrel.

US trading was closed Monday for Presidents Day, but markets in Europe and Asia shuddered as Putin moved to secure Russia's hold on Ukraine's rebel regions, adding to fears of a full-scale invasion.

Those actions have undermined hopes for averting a conflict that could cause massive casualties, energy shortages on the continent and economic chaos around the globe.

Germany's DAX slipped 0.1 per cent to 14,719.16 and the CAC 40 in Paris was flat at 6,788.13. Britain's FTSE 100 gave up 0.4 per cent to 7,452.18. US futures were lower, with the contract for the S&P 500 down 0.1 per cent and the future for the Dow industrials 0.2 per cent lower.

Sofar, the biggest losses have been in Russia, where the MOEX index was down 3.5 per cent after losing nearly 11 per cent on Monday. The ruble was 2.5 per cent lower.

In Asia, Tokyo's Nikkei 225 index dropped 1.7 per cent to 26,449.61 while the Hang Seng in Hong Kong regained some lost ground to close 2.7 per cent lower at 23,520.00. South Korea's Kospi lost 1.4 per cent to 2,706.79 and the Shanghai Composite index fell 1 per cent to 3,457.15. Australia's S&P/ASX 200 lost 1 per cent to 7,161.30.

Oman oil hits $96.51

MUSCAT: The price of Oman oil has increased, with prices for delivery by April 2022 reaching $96.51, said Dubai Mercantile Exchange (DME).

The DME statement said that the price of Oman oil rose by $4.27 from the price of Monday, which was $92.24. The average price of Oman oil (February delivery 2022) has stabilised at $73.14, thus $7.12 per barrel lower than January delivery 2022. -ONA

The turmoil in Ukraine has upped uncertainty at a time when investors already are jittery over how the world's central banks, especially the US Federal Reserve, will act to counter surging inflation while coronavirus outbreaks are fuelled by the highly contagious omicron variant cloud the outlook for many countries.

Higher oil prices complicate that situation.

Many Asian economies depend on oil and gas imports, and even if those don't come from Russia, the spillover effects on world markets will raise energy costs at a time when countries are still barely recovering from the pandemic.

On other fronts, Treasury yields have been falling as investors shift money into the safety of US bonds. The yield on the 10-year Treasury, which affects rates on mortgages and other consumer loans, was at 1.90 per cent by early today, down from 1.93 per cent on Monday.

In currency trading, the US dollar rose to 114.80 Japanese yen from 114.74 yen late Monday. The euro climbed to $1.1317 from $1.1312. US stocks capped a week of volatile trading with a broad sell-off on Friday.

The S&P 500 and Dow Jones Industrial Average both slipped 0.7 per cent. The Nasdaq composite bore the brunt of the selling, skidding 1.2 per cent. Small company stocks also fell, with the Russell 2000 index down 0.9 per cent, the Associated Press news reported. -ONA

DUBAI DIAMOND CONFERENCE 2022

UAE becomes world's largest rough diamond trading hub

DUBAI: Ahmed Bin Sulayem, Executive Chairman and Chief Executive Officer, DMCC, announced that the UAE reached the top spot globally as a rough diamond hub, trading over $22.8 billion worth of rough diamonds in 2021.

He made the remarks as Dubai Multi Commodities Centre (DMCC) hosted its flagship Dubai Diamond Conference (DDC) held under the theme "The Future of Diamonds".

The country's polished segment continues to grow at pace, closing in on the current market leader, he added. Since 2015, the UAE has increased its rough diamonds trade by 76 per cent, overtaking Belgium as the world's leading rough trade hub.

The total diamond trade in the UAE grew by 83 per cent between 2020 and 2021, demonstrating both the industry's resilience and Dubai's critical role in the global sector. Dubai boasts direct flights to other diamond hubs across the world, including mining countries in Africa and manufacturing centres in India, resulting in a connected supply chain with Dubai at its centre. Additionally, Dubai is home to the two Kimberly Process (KP) offices in the UAE, making the emirate the only entry point for rough diamonds in the country. — WAM

ECONOMIC GROWTH

China to step up tax, fee cuts to support market entities

BEIJING: China will intensify tax and fee cuts with targeted measures in 2022 to bring benefits for market entities and bolster economic growth, according to the Finance Ministry.

"China will see a larger scale of tax and fee cuts this year," the minister of finance Liu Kun told a press conference, citing that the country cut about 1.1 trillion yuan (about $173.9 billion) of taxes and fees last year.

The country will maintain appropriate levels of fiscal expenditure while giving priorities to key sectors including sci-tech breakthroughs, environmental protection and major regional strategies, Liu said.

Measures will be taken to allocate local government special bonds in a reasonable manner, Liu said, noting that the country issued 484.4 billion yuan in January to fund projects in the transport, industrial park infrastructure and other key areas.

The figure accounted for one-third of the 1.46 trillion-yuan funds that were allocated late last year from the country's 2022 quota for local government special bonds. China will see an increase in its transfer payments to local governments, especially for less developed regions. — Xinhua

DOES EATING VEGETABLES PROTECT AGAINST CARDIOVASCULAR DISEASES? NO, SAYS STUDY

Since childhood, we have been told that a sufficient intake of vegetables is essential for maintaining a balanced diet and avoiding a wide range of diseases. But does a diet rich in vegetables also lower the risk of cardiovascular disease (CVD)? Unfortunately, researchers from the Nuffield Department of Population Health at the University of Oxford, the Chinese University of Hong Kong, and the University of Bristol found no evidence for this.

The large-scale new study was published in 'Frontiers in Nutrition'.

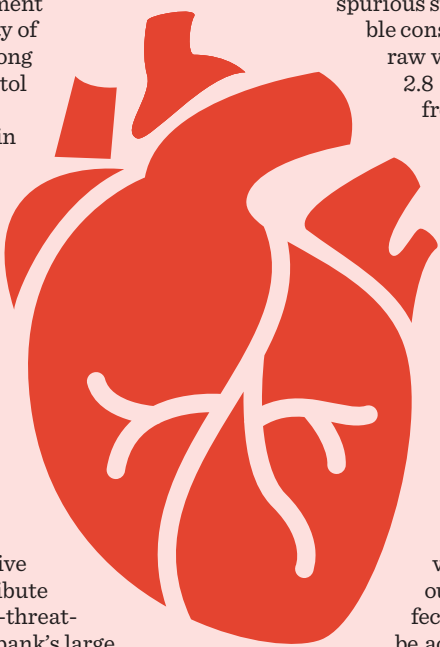

That the consumption of vegetables might lower the risk of CVD might, at first sight, seem plausible, as their ingredients such as carotenoids and alpha-tocopherol have properties that could protect against CVD. But so far, the evidence from previous studies for an overall effect of vegetable consumption on CVD has been inconsistent.

The results from the powerful, large-scale study showed that higher consumption of cooked or uncooked vegetables is unlikely to affect the risk of CVD. They also explained how confounding factors might have explained previous spurious, positive findings.

"The UK Biobank is a large-scale prospective study on how genetics and environment contribute to the development of the most common and life-threatening diseases. Here we make use of the UK Biobank's large sample size, long-term follow-up, and detailed information on social and lifestyle factors, to assess reliably the association of vegetable intake with the risk of subsequent CVD," said Prof Naomi Allen, UK Biobank's chief scientist and co-author on the study.

The UK Biobank followed the health of half a million adults in the UK by linking to their healthcare records. Upon their enrollment in 2006-2010, these volunteers were interviewed about their diet, lifestyle, medical and reproductive history, and other factors.

The researchers used the responses at enrollment of 399,586 participants (of whom 4.5 per cent went on to develop CVD) to questions about their daily average consumption of uncooked versus cooked vegetables. They analyzed the association with the risk of hospitalization or death from myocardial infarction, stroke, or major CVD. They controlled for a wide range of possible confounding factors, including socioeconomic status, physical activity, and other dietary factors.

Crucially, the researchers also assessed the potential role of 'residual confounding', that is, whether unknown additional factors or inaccurate measurement of known factors might lead to a spurious statistical association between CVD risk and vegetable consumption. The mean daily intake of total vegetables, raw vegetables, and cooked vegetables were 5.0, 2.3, and 2.8 heaped tablespoons per person. The risk of dying from CVD was about 15 per cent lower for those with the highest intake compared to the lowest vegetable intake.

However, this apparent effect was substantially weakened when possible socioeconomic, nutritional, and health- and medicine-related confounding factors were taken into account. Controlling for these factors reduced the predictive statistical power of vegetable intake on CVD by over 80 per cent, suggesting that more precise measures of these confounders would have completely explained any residual effect of vegetable intake.

Dr Qi Feng, a researcher at the Nuffield Department of Population Health at the University of Oxford, and the study's lead author said, "Our large study did not find evidence for a protective effect of vegetable intake on the occurrence of CVD. Instead, our analyses show that the seemingly protective effect of vegetable intake against CVD risk is very likely to be accounted for by bias from residual confounding factors, related to differences in socioeconomic situation and lifestyle."

Feng et al. suggested that future studies should further assess whether particular types of vegetables or their method of preparation might affect the risk of CVD.

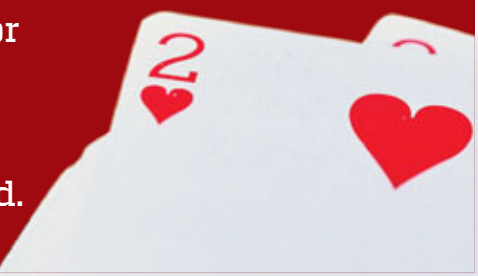

The last author Dr Ben Lacey, Associate Professor in the department at the University of Oxford, concluded: "This is an important study with implications for understanding the dietary causes of CVD and the burden of CVD normally attributed to low vegetable intake. However, eating a balanced diet and maintaining a healthy weight remains an important part of maintaining good health and reducing risk of major diseases, including some cancers. It is widely recommended that at least five portions of a variety of fruits and vegetables should be eaten every day." - ANI

Is it bad luck to get married on a double number date?

Dates like 22.02.2022 are popular for weddings. There is a long history of attaching significance to numbers, and meanings vary around the world.

IT TAKES two people to make a covenant of love. No wonder, then, that in primarily Christian parts of the world, the number two is regarded as the “number of Christian love and mutual affection, of marriages and social life.” At least this is how the German polymath Heinrich Cornelius Agrippa von Nettesheim put it in his 16th-century seminal work, “Three Books of Occult Philosophy,” which dealt with magic and its relationship with religion.

These days, couples who would like to have their bond reflected in their wedding date can celebrate with the number two on 22.02.2022. In Germany, a doubled number is referred to as a “Schnapszahl” or “liq-uor number” for the fact that there’s the tendency to see things double when drunk.

A “Schnapszahl” date is symbolic of strength, says Berlin psychotherapist and author Wolfgang Krüger. “People attribute a certain lucky effect to it,” he told the German news agency dpa. This, he said, corresponds to the attitude toward marriage, which is symbolically charged.

In China, as well as in Thailand and Vietnam, seven is also an unlucky number. The seventh month is regarded as a month of ghosts. In contrast, seven is often a lucky number in Christian, Muslim and Jewish cultures. In the respective holy scriptures, there are numerous examples in which the number seven promises good things. In the Bible, for example, the world was created in seven days.

In many cultures, 13 is the number of misfortune. The superstitious fear of the number 13 even has its own term, “triskaidekaphobia.” Some airlines therefore do without a thirteenth row in their fleet of aircraft.

Lucky numbers and auspicious dates

Choosing to have weddings on a date with numbers considered lucky is done around the world. In China, there were numerous mass weddings on auspicious dates, especially in 2008 and 2009, since the numbers eight and nine have great significance in some parts of the world. In China, for example, the number eight is connected to wealth and health.

On August 8, 2008, 314,224 couples said “I do” to one another — more than 15,000 in Beijing alone. Getting married on 09.09.2009 was expected to lead to a long and happy future, because when pronounced, the number nine sounds similar to the word “jiu,” which means “long-lasting.”

Doubled numbers — especially eights and nines — are considered lucky in China, where it is said that “good things come in pairs.” Two is not a bad number either, as even numbers are considered stable and balanced.

ing can vary greatly. In Kabbalah, for example, this happens through the interchangeability of numbers and letters. Another possibility is reflected by the example of the number four in China, where phonetic similarity with the word “death” was the origin of the association. Religious traditions and traditional fairy tales are other sources.

In Germany, February is a rather unpopular wedding month, statistically speaking. Between 2011 and 2020, only an average of 3.5% of all weddings took place in this winter month. However the dates become more popular when calendar palindromes — sequences of numbers like those on February 22, 2022, which read the same forwards and backwards — come into play. Two years ago, the dates 02.02.2020 and 20.02.2020 were linked to marriage peaks in February.

Friday the 13th is not only unpopular among brides and grooms: it has also been ingrained in pop culture, most famously via the 1980 horror film of the same name directed by Sean Cunningham. The fear of this date can turn into a phobia: Those who avoid appointments on Friday the 13th or can’t get out of bed on this day may suffer from “paraskavedekatriaphobia,” which comes from the Greek words for Friday, “paraskevi” and thirteen “dekatria.”

The origins of number symbolism

Author Udo Becker says in his work “Lexicon of Symbols,” that numbers “in most cultures and religions are symbol carriers with meanings that are rich, often complicated and not always transparent today.” The connection between numbers and meaning has existed for millennia, at least since 2900 BC in Mesopotamia.

The meaning of numbers was also prevalent in Pythagorean culture. The Kabbalah teachings — an orally transmitted mystical tradition within Judaism — and medieval magical speculations are known for having connections between numbers and meaning. However, today number symbolism lives on, mostly in esoteric numerology, which according to Becker consists of “mostly completely baseless speculations.”

How a number arrives at its mean-

Numbers of misfortune

However, specific numbers that are assigned possible positive and negative effects vary from culture to culture.

In India, for instance, eight is the number of misfortune. In China, meanwhile, the unlucky number is four due to its phonetic similarity to the word “death.” Even outside of China, many Asians now avoid the number due to its negative connotations. In buildings, for example, the third floor is occasionally followed by the fifth, and in skyscrapers, the floors 40 to 49 are

Lincoln celebrates century of luxury and elegance

MUSCAT: Lincoln Motor Company was purchased from distinguished inventor and automotive engineer Henry Leland on 4th February 1922 by Henry Ford. An $8 million deal that had the support of Henry Ford's wife Clara and his son Edsel Ford. The transaction set in motion the creation of an iconic American luxury automotive brand.

"We are at a defining moment in our history. We look back at Lincoln's past and find inspiration for the future and, to reflect on what we have accomplished – maintaining a balance between the brand's core values and redefining our vehicle and experiences for the next generation of luxury clients," says Joy Falotico, president, Lincoln. "The timing of our 100th anniversary couldn't be more ideal as we shift to an electrified future, and I look forward to shepherding the brand into the next 100 years."

And as the brand celebrates its 100th anniversary and storied past, it is equally focused on an exciting future. Lincoln is committed to the future delivering a unique line-up of electrified vehicles and connected services that create effortless experiences for its clients.

"With classic style, form and function that became the hallmark of the brand, there's something very special about Lincoln," said Jim Farley, president and CEO, Ford. "And as we move toward an electric future with connected technologies and always-on experiences, I am so excited to see where the brand will go as it begins its second century."

A century of innovation

Much of the success the company experienced early on is credited to the influence of Edsel Ford, who served as president of Lincoln from shortly after acquisition to his death in 1943. His ambition is summed up best in his own famous words – "Father made the most popular cars in the world; I want to make the best."

Edsel prioritized design and styling, while also making customization affordable, allowing him to offer precision and performance in a beautifully executed package, at a price within reach. The belief that a car could be more than just transportation was foundational to the rise of Lincoln.

In 1936 the company introduced the Lincoln Zephyr, the brand's first mid-priced vehicle that featured a streamlined design and an "alligator"-type hood. In 1939 the Lincoln Continental debuted as a personal-use vehicle, becoming an instant design classic and quickly establishing the personal luxury car segment in America.

In 1952 Edsel's son, William Clay Ford was appointed manager of special product operations, in charge of engineers and designers planning the Continental's successor, the Continental Mark II, considered by many ones of the greatest cars ever built.

Through the years, Lincoln has pioneered multiple new features and innovations and continues to introduce advancements today.

Redefining Lincoln brand

For a century, Lincoln has focused on forward-looking innovations, while maintaining its core values that keep the brand's products fresh and desirable.

The introduction of the fourth-generation Navigator in 2018 was instrumental to an upturn in the direction of the brand. A combination of modern luxury and innovative technology, including the debut of 30-Way Perfect Position Seats in the all-new flagship SUV, elevated first-class travel for families, kicking off a resurgence that Lincoln continues to advance today. The momentum continues with the introduction of new products and services.

The core tenets that made Lincoln an American luxury brand are evident in today's vehicles, services and client experiences, driving the spirit of Lincoln for more than 10 decades now and counting. As the brand looks ahead, Lincoln is laser-focused on advancing its Quiet Flight DNA into an electrified and connected future. By 2030 it will have a full portfolio of connected and electrified vehicles globally.

To mark the occasion, Lincoln is kicking off a yearlong series of global events connecting the past and the present to an exciting future in the years to come. Lincoln retailers are working to honour this milestone as well, with 100 stores hosting events with their clients and local communities throughout the year.

In Oman, Lincoln vehicles are brought to you by Arabian Car Marketing Co.
